

Care and Feeding of Supervisors

Supervisors are a key component of organizational success. So why don't companies treat supervisor selection and development as a critical talent management strategy? In this session, we'll examine why supervisors are so important and discuss ways to select, train, and support these key players.

Learning Objectives:

- Understand why supervisors are so important to organizational success
- Understand the factors that determine how successful the transition from worker to supervisor will be
- Know the key skills supervisors require to succeed
- Know the key components of supervisor training and support to help supervisors succeed in their role
